TRESPASSING, maurauding and pilfering having become so prevalent in the neighbourhood of Pittsburgh, we have considered it a bounden duty to protect our property from such violators of both the laws and constitution of our country. And any person who may in future be detected either in trespassing on our property and enclosures, plundering, or pilfering and destroying of what is ours, and not theirs, may rest assured, that without any exception of persons, they will be prosecuted to the full extent of law provided against such offenders. The foolish and inconsiderate, depend on their heels nocturnal address and unknown faces; but they must reflect that good dogs, and guns of sure fire, may bring them to justice—This notice will be considered in its true spirit, and not to cut ourselves off from the intercourse of our friends, or that society which we shall always be happy in seeing at our houses, by the highway thereto.

From the European Magazine for May.

Astonishing celerity in manufacturing Cloth for a wager of one thousand guineas.

The attention of the town and neighborhood of Newbury, [Eng.] was uncommonly excited on Tuesday, June 23, 1816, in an experiment attempted and effected by Mr. John Coxeter, of Greenham Mills, near that town. At 5 o'clock that morning, Mr. John Throckmorton, Bart. presented two Southdown weather sheep to Mr. Coxeter, he having engaged to make from their wool a complete coat for Sir John T. by 9 o'clock in the evening. Accordingly the sheep were shorn, the wool spun, the yarn spooled, warped, loomed and wove; the cloth burred, milled, rowed, dyed, dried, sheared and pressed, and put into the hands of the tailors by four o'clock that afternoon, and at 20 minutes past six, the coat, entirely finished, was presented by Mr. Coxeter to Sir John Throckmorton, who appeared with it before an assemblage of upwards of 5000 spectators, who rent the air in acclamations. On the occasion the two sheep were roasted whole on the same day, one of which, with 120 gallons of strong beer, was given to the work people belonging to the factory, the other to the public on board the Prince Regent, a vessel furnished for that purpose; and thus the experiment, hitherto unexampled, was completely effected in the short space of 13 hours and 20 minutes.

An old gentleman of the name of Gould lately married a girl scarcely 19 years of age. After the wedding the juvenile bridegroom addressed to his friend Dr. G—the following couplet to inform him of the happy event:

"So you see, my dear sir, tho' eighty years old,
A girl of nineteen falls in love with old GOULD."

To which the doctor replied—

"A girl of nineteen may love GOULD, it is true;
But believe me, dear sir, it is GOLD without U."

We learn from a late traveller in Egypt, that a Dongolese horse had been sold at Cairo, at a price equal to a thousand guineas sterling. Bruce describes the horses of Dongola as the most perfect in the world. "At Halfaia and Gerri begins that noble race of horses justly celebrated all over the world. They are the breed introduced here at the Saracen conquest, and have been preserved unmixed to this day. They seem to be a distinct species from the Arabian horse such as I have seen in the plains of Arabia Deserta, south of Palmyra and Damascus, where I take the most excellent of the Arabian breed to be in the tribes of Mowalli and Annecy, which is about lat. 36. Whilst Dongola, and the dry country near it, seems to be the centre of excellence for this noble animal; so that the bounds within which the horse is in its greatest perfection seem to be between that lat. 20 and 36, and between long. 30 east from Greenwich, to the banks of the Euphrates. To this extent Farenheit's thermometer is never below 50 in the night or 80 in the day, though it may rise to 120 at noon in the shade, at which point horses are not affected by the heat, but will breed as they do at Halfaia and Dongola. They are," he adds, "entirely different from the Arabian; but if beautiful and symmetrical parts, great size and strength, the most agile, nervous, and elastic movements, great endurance of fatigue, docility of temper, and seeming attachment to man, beyond any other animal, can promise any thing for a stallion, the Nubian is above all comparison, the most eligible in the world. The horses of Halfaia and Gerri do not arrive at the size of those in Dongola, where few are lower than sixteen hands. They are black or white, but a vast proportion of the former to the latter. I never saw the colour we call grey, that is dappled; but there are some bright bays, or inclining to sorrel. They are all kept monstrously fat upon dora, eating nothing green but the short roots of grass, found by the side of the Nile, after the sun has withered it.—This they dig out where it is covered with earth, and appears blanched, which they lay in small heaps once a day on the ground before them. They are tethered by the fetlock joint of the fore leg with a very soft cotton rope, made with a loop & large button. They eat and drink with a bridle in their mouth." The traveller relates also the superior good qualities of the horse of Shekh Adelan, not quite four years old, and full sixteen hands high.

EXPERIMENT OF THE BOTTLE.

To the editor of the London Monthly Magazine.

Sir—Having seen some remarks in your Magazine for December, 1815, p. 392, respecting sinking of an empty bottle closely corked, to the depth of 100 fathoms, I am induced to hope you will not deem the following account of six experiments, made on board the Prince Leopold, near the Bay of Biscay, on the 10th of October last, as unworthy of insertion.

First, we let down an empty bottle, well corked (which was sunk by the aid of lead) about 50 fathoms; when drawn up, it was filled with water, the cork inverted, and forced about half way out of the bottle.—The bottle was filled with fresh water, closely corked and let down again; when drawn up, the cork was inverted as before, and the bottle full of water which was brackish.

The third time, the captain put a piece of twine under the cork, and tied it round the neck of the bottle, so that, if the cork went in the twine must brake. It was again sunk to the same depth, and, when taken up, the cord was much forced, but not broken, and the bottle was about half full of water.

A piece of twine was again put under the cork and a thick coat of sealing-wax on the top of it. It was sunk this time 98 fathoms; when raised the twine and seal were both broken, and the cork inverted.

We then tied a piece of twine under the cork, forced a strong stocking needle through the top of it, which rested on each side of the bottle's neck, and dipped it in boiling pitch. It was let down the same depth as the last, and when taken up, the cork was turned as before, the twine broken, the needle bent and forced in with the cork, and the bottle full of water.

The sixth time, we put a cord cross-wise under the cork, the cork and bottle-neck were dipped in boiling pitch, afterwards a piece of strong canvas was tied closely over the warm pitch, then the canvas, cork, and bottle-neck, dipped in pitch again, and sunk to the depth of 98 fathoms. On drawing it up, it appeared that the water had pressed with great force on the cork, but the bottle was empty. This proves that the water must enter at the cork, and not as Mr. Campbell, in his Travels in Africa, seems to suppose, through the pores of the bottle. [Feb. 1817.

The White Wild Sheep of the Rocky Mountains.

The beautiful skin presented by John Jacob Astor, esq. to Dr. Mitchell, turns out to be one of the rarest productions in North America. It belongs to a species of sheep, or possibly to an animal connecting the sheep, goat and antelope, running wild on the rocky mountains. The present specimen is the only one ever seen in New York; and was brought with other furs, by the way of Lake Superior from the region beyond the sources of the Missouri.

It is covered outwardly with a sort of shaggy hair, and within the hair with a fine wool equalling the most delicate merino.—The whole is as white as milk.

It appears to resemble almost exactly, the fleece brought by capt. Lewis from the Columbia river, and described by George Ord, esq. in the journal of the academy of natural sciences in Philadelphia.

The specimen of this highly interesting quadruped was exhibited to the Lyceum, at a late meeting; and has been since deposited in the cabinet of natural history, at the New York institution.

In a zoological memoir which was read on the occasion, Dr. M. bestowed a just eulogy upon the liberality of the donor in having made so seasonable and valuable a contribution.

AGRICULTURE.

DIKED AND DRAINED MEADOWS.

Rarely, indeed, have we felt so strongly impressed with a sense of the value of improvement, as on a recent view of gen. Swartwout's diked and drained meadow at Hoboken. Here is to be seen a large and level tract of alluvial land, with soil of black mould, apparently inexaustible in strength, covered with oats and timothy grass, inferior to none in this part of the country.—The fact which gen. Swartwout has demonstrated to such of our farmers as will believe nothing but what they see, is of incalculable interest. Both shores of Long Island, and indeed all our sea-board have great tracts of drowned lands, which might be reclaimed from the ocean, and rendered greatly superior to the uplands. We are told that in Flushing there is a single tract of eleven hundred acres which is so favourably situated that it may be diked and drained for about one dollar per acre. If our farmers are not blind, they will profit greatly by the enterprizing example of Gen. Swartwourt. [L. I. Star

From the Connecticut Courant.

The change of words from an honest to a dishonest meaning.—Words as well as things change by time; and whether it be that a great many more words are needed to express the vices than the virtues of mankind, it so happens that they much oftener change from a good to a bad meaning than contrariwise.

"I remember," says the noted Dean of St. Patrick's, "at a trial in Kent, where Sir George Rook was indicted for calling a gentleman knave and villain, the lawyer for the defendant brought off his client by alledging, that the words were not injurious; for knave in the old and true signification imported only a servant; and villain in Latin, is vilicus, which is no more than a man employed in country labour."

Thus, the once fair and comely words Liberty, Equality Economy by being explained according to the rule of contraries in certain modern schools of politics, have at length obtained a foul meaning. In France, the two former were most shockingly befouled; and the standard political lexicographers of this blessed country of ours have made it out, that the latter, in its application to the concerns of a nation, signifies plunging as deep as possible into debt—multiplying the number of offices & swarm of officers—increase of salaries—trebling the weight of taxes, so that the people may crouch down under their burdens with due humility and self abasement—and putting the avails into the hands of rogues and cheats, that they may run away with the money.

NEWS EXPECTED.

"Ah! news, that is what we want"—a reader will say. "Is there any late arrival, that brings accounts of Bonaparte's escape, entry into Paris, assuming the reins of government in France?" No. "Have the allies made common cause and joined Spain in a war upon Portugal, on account of the late proceedings at the River Plate?" Nothing like it. "Has there been a thorough revolution in Great Britain, and is Lord Cochrane or Mr. Orator Hunt called to the throne?—do not in this dry time for news, keep us in suspense. Has the President broken a leg in climbing over Monadnuck?" We have no reason to expect that.—But from the particularity with which the Boston papers tell us about the weather, the warm days and the rainy days, the winds and the showers—we fully expect to hear, by tomorrow or Monday, that on this day—that is the 25th July, dog-days commenced.

PITTSBURGH.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 15, 1817.

Emigration.—In Niles Register of the 2d inst. is published an account of the number of emigrants who have arrived in the United States for TWO WEEKS preceding the 1st inst. by which it appears that the total number is 2272. Of these 1415 have arrived from Great Britain, 826 from Germany and Switzerland, and 31 from France. It is supposed that the number arriving the next two weeks will be considerably greater.

REMARKABLE DEPRAVITY.

Among a number of persons lately tried at Troy N. Y. for various crimes, there was a man by the name of Hagerty convicted on two indictments for grand larceny and one for forgery, and sentenced to the state prison for fourteen years. The Troy Post thus speaks of him:

JOHN HAGERTY affords a remarkable instance of depravity. He was first committed to gaol for stealing a pocket book from a gentleman's pocket, while riding in the waggon with him; which was but a few weeks before he was tried. While in prison he committed a forgery in counterfeiting a bank bill; and on the first day of the term in which he was tried, he stole about fifty dollars in money, and sent it to counsel for a fee to defend him. He was tried on all the above offences and convicted. While he was on trial in court, he stole from the pockets of gentlemen who sat in the bar before him, two handkerchiefs; for which however, it was thought unnecessary to convict him.

Golden Harvest.—The Canada papers state that the oldest people do not remember a season when there was such an appearance of abundant crops of all kinds of grain as at this season, both in Upper and Lower Canada. Strangers just arrived from Britain affirm that they never saw finer crops in the richest English counties, or the highly cultivated fields of the Lowlands.

A quantity of Bagdad Wheat (says the Boston Palladium) is in flourishing growth at Brighton, Mass. One kernel of this wheat weighed as much as three of the common wheat.

[The British Spy, written in Virginia, in 1803, and attributed to one of the ablest scholars and civilians of that State, has an interesting sketch of the present President of the United States. We extract from it the following paragraphs.]

"His dress and personal appearance are those of a plain and modest gentleman. He is a man of soft, polite and even assiduous attentions; but these, although they are always well timed, judicious and evidently the offspring of an obliging and philanthropic temper are never performed with the striking and captivating graces of a Marlborough or a Bollingbroke. To explain, there is often in his manner an artificial and even an awkward simplicity, which while it provokes the smile of a more polished person, forces him to the conviction that Mr. Monroe is a man of a most sincere and artless soul."

"As the elevated ground which he already holds, has been gained merely by the force of application; as every new step which he mounts, becomes a mean of increasing his power still farther, by stimulating his enterprize afresh, re-invigorating his habits, multiplying the materials and extending the range of his knowledge, it would be a matter of no surprise to me, if before his death, the world should see him at the head of the American administration. So much for the Monroe of the commonwealth of Virginia; a living, an honorable, and illustrious monument of self-created eminence, worth and greatness!"

We learn that GEORGE HALL, who is stated to be a native of Baltimore, and to have been on board a Spanish vessel which was wrecked some time ago upon the coast of Africa, where he fell into the hands of the Arabs, of Lower Suze, has been released from slavery, through the exertions of Mr. Wiltshire, a British consul at Mogadore in the kingdom of Morocco—and on the first of May last, he was at Mogadore, whence Mr. Wiltshire was about sending him to Gibraltar, on his return to the United States.

Thief detected.—Several years ago, a packet containing ten thousand dollars in notes and post notes of the bank of Newberg, and belonging to the bank, was put on board capt. Griswold's sloop to be sent up the north river, and was stolen a few months after it was received. The bank made great exertions to detect the villain who took the money, but without success, until within a few days past. The cashier lately received a letter from Montreal, informing him that several post notes, of the bank of Newberg, to the amount of about twenty five hundred dollars, indorsed Griggs Knap, had been offered there under such circumstances as excited suspicion; the notes were described and the person who offered them. This information, together with the fact of the absence from Newberg for several weeks of the described person, fixed the suspicion upon Briggs Belnap, who was mate of the sloop at the time of the theft. He was apprehended and a package containing 260 dollars of the very bills that were stolen, and which appeared to have lain untouched in the drawer since the first time they were missing, were found in his desk: Upon examination, he was ordered to be committed to jail at Goshen, where he is lodged for trial. He then made a full confession of his guilt, and acknowledged that he had been to Montreal, and offered the post notes there, but being suspected, had, he said destroyed them. His property we understand is sufficient, to make good the amount with interest.

It will be recollected that suspicions were abroad at the time involving many innocent persons. Two men, by the names of Sherwood and Williard, were actually indicted for the theft, tried, and with difficulty acquitted; the jury declaring they believed them guilty, but could not be justified in bringing in a verdict to that effect on mere circumstantial evidence.

N. Y. E. Post.

Murderous Attempt.—On Tuesday last, about sun set, JOEL BRIGHAM, Esq. of this town, while returning from Buffalo, on leaving the beach of Lake Erie, about one mile from Captain Mack's, near the mouth of Cattaraugus Creek, was fired upon by some unseen person; and the ball entered his back just below the midriff about three inches from the back bone, and came out two inches from the navel. At the instant of receiving the wound, he turned round and discovered an Indian, as he believed, with his head and part of his body visible from behind the trunk of a tree. On examining himself, he found the blood gushing out from both sides of his body. But pursuing his journey for some distance till he became faint by the loss of blood, sat down upon a log, and looking back discovered the perpetrator in pursuit of him: he rose up, shook his cane and hallooed at him, when he darted into the woods. He then made his way on, and arrived at capt. Mack's about dark, nearly exhausted. His life was despaired of for some days, but we were yesterday informed by Doct. Howe, the attending surgeon, that the symptoms were very favorable.

On application of the citizens to the Chiefs, a council of the indians, who reside in that vicinity, was called, and several suspected indians were examined, when, from circumstances, the crime was alledged to a young Indian by the name of Long-fingers. It appears that the Chiefs were satisfied of his guilt, and gave him up to our authority who have deposited him in Buffalo jail to await his trial.

Fredonia (N. Y. Gaz.)

From the N. Y. Evening Post, Aug. 4.

Mr. Sheriff Hubbard.—What every body says must be true, and therefore, there is no doubt that the high sheriff of this city and county, instead of ignobly taking the bodies of poor unfortunate debtors, has taken himself off, and actually sailed from this port in his own brig to join Sir Gregor Mac Gregor in the glorious war of patriotism. We are happy, however, (to borrow an expression) to learn that neither the public nor individuals will suffer, from monies being collected by him as sheriff; he having, in long contemplation of the patriotic deed, so ordered it, that all monies of that nature should be paid over to a principal deputy, in whom the utmost confidence might be placed. God bless the commonwealth! as the cryer of Massachusetts has it.

Report also says, that the brig Morgiana, in which Mr. Sheriff shipped himself, is lying off and on Sandy-Hook; and that the revenue-cutter and another U. S. vessel of war, have gone to watch her movements, lest her intention should be to infringe the laws.

Extract of a letter from Gibraltar, dated 17th May, 1817, to a gentleman in N. York.

"Yesterday arrived here the U. S. ship United States, Captain Shaw, from Algiers, which place he left on the 8th inst. Wm. Shaler, our Consul General, is on board the United States. We understand that he is on a tour of duty through the Barbary Consulates, and that our relations with Algiers continue to be upon the most amicable footing. The U. S. proceeds immediately to join the Commodore, who is waiting for Mr. Shaler in Mahon."

From the New-York Evening Post, July 30.

Brutal Cruelty.—Three gentlemen who came in the brig Telegraph, from Charleston, have just called to request me to give the following extraordinary facts, for the purpose of having them communicated to the public, that every man in the community may unite with the officers of justice in hunting up a monster, too savage to be tolerated in society.

A French lady, remarkable for her great beauty of countenance and refined manners, took passage in the same vessel, in search of her husband, understood to be in New-York. On the voyage her manners charmed every one, and created an uncommon interest in her fate. The next day after her arrival, having learned that she was at a French boarding house in the upper part of the city, the gentlemen called to inquire after her. Judge of their distress and astonishment, to find her very ill of a horrible wound, which had deprived her face of one of its principle features.

They learnt that her husband, who is an Italian, by the name of Ange Pienovi, being sent for on her arrival, came to the house, but after she had retired to her room to take a little repose after her fatigue, when, being admitted to her apartment, he seized the occasion of her being asleep to revenge an old jealousy; flew at her, and with his teeth bit her nose entirely off. He then left the house; immediately fled, and has hitherto eluded the officers of justice, who have been in pursuit of him since Tuesday. It is hoped all persons will aid in ferreting this atrocious ruffian out of his concealment.

This is revenge without a parallel, except the case mentioned by Littleton, where an Italian carried AQUA-FORTIS in a syringe for six months together, which, at length, he squirted into the eyes of his supposed rival, and deprived him of his sight forever.

Vast masses of Native North American Copper.

The native copper found around Lake Superior, has been long a theme of conversation. On one occasion, a company was formed in England, with a large monied capital, to work the mines. On another, an agent was to have been sent there by order of congress, to explore for copper.

It appears by certain late intelligence received through Dr. Francis Le Barron apothecary general of the United States, that a body of this virgin metal, heavier perhaps than any in the known world, is now lying in the bed of the Ouatanagan river, a stream running into Lake Superior from the south. It is reported to measure in girth, or circumfererence, twelve feet at one end, and fourteen feet round at the other. As far as judgment can be formed the mass is compact throughout, and of singular purity.

The specimen which Dr. Le. Barron gave to Dr. Mitchell, was accompanied by a curious map of the western half of Lake Superior, drawn by a youth of the Chippewa tribe. On this are delineated the Ouatanagan, and the place where the native copper exists; as are also all the memorable streams, bays and islands to the FORD DU LAC, or bottom of the lake.

When they were laid before the institution, they were received with a becoming sense of the generosity and public spirit of the gentleman who procured and offered them.

JACOB NEGLEY.
Pittsburgh, July 8th 1817.

A grand object for the Enterprising,

WHEREIN a partner is wanted, to improve & occupy one of the most eligible and advantageous Mill-seats in the Western world. It is situated in the Illinois Territory, within six miles of Vincennes, on the great road leading to St. Louis and Kaskaskia, on the river Amberas, which is a stream sufficiently large to afford water to carry on any works that may be thought necessary, at all times—One of the banks of the stream is a permanent rock, rather of the saponaceous kind impervious to water and easily cut or fashioned, as may be required—the bottom of the stream, opposite the mill is all sheeted with the same. The seat lies within one and a half miles of the Wabash river, enjoys all the advantages of the navigation of the same—the circumjacent country is equal to any section in the western country for agriculture, and especially for that staple commodity, WHEAT, as its situation is high and undulating, and of course healthy—the soil of a black loam mixed with sand—the face of the country interspersed with praries of the most agreeable texture, and in fertility second to none, and for the most part surrounded by luxuriant wood-lands, and as we may say it is yet almost in a state of nature, and affords a most advantageous range for cattle, hogs, etc. A number of families have lately settled in the vicinity, and shortly we look for a flourishing settlement there. Nature has been exuberant at the seat, as there is scarce any advantage that the enterprising partizan might almost wish or expect that is not to be found there. Take into view the manufacturing of flower largely for foreign markets—a complete seat for a boat and ship yard also, for a brewery, distillery, and tanyard. and a well equipped tavern is much wanted at present to accommodate the road, and for which it is an excellent stand—there are many other advantages that will appear by taking a view of the premises. There is an excellent saw-mill now going, on the spot.
My primary object is to have erected and equiped a merchant mill with not less than three pair of stones. I will furnish the seat upon equitable terms.
It is hoped none will offer that are not of good standing in society, men of enterprize, and possessed of such funds as will enable them to carry on largely. A trio partnership would be preferred, as there is a great field for enterprize.
I also wish to sell the plantation I now live on, it contains 400 acres, 80 of which is under high cultivation, the fertility of which is second to none, has on it an excellent never failing spring, well calculated for a brewery or distillery as it has a great fall, situated within 3 miles of Vincennes, the subscriber who lives on the premises would think himself honored by any gentleman's calling who might have an eye to either of the objects & would take pleasure in shewing the same.
